The shark was one of five caught for research purposes in the Indian Ocean. It was found about four miles from the lagoon where the victim was last seen. It is not known whether the man was eaten by the shark after being drowned.

Brazil court ruling
may free Lula

Brasilia: Brazil's supreme court voted to overturn a ruling requiring convicted criminals to go to jail after losing their first appeal, paving the way for leftist icon Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva to be freed. The decision means thousands of convicted could be released from prison, including Lula, who is among dozens of political and business leaders caught up in a sprawling corruption probe. They would remain free until they had exhausted their rights to appeal their conviction — which critics say could take years in cases involving people with deep pockets. Lula's lawyers said they would seek the 'immediate release' of the former president after speaking to him.

Protesters light candles to pay homage to Chow Tsz-Lok, who fell off a parking garage after police fired tear gas during clashes with anti-government protesters, died in a rare fatality after five months of unrest.

Student death fuels unrest in HK

Thousands of Hong Kongers hold vigils for Chow, first student fatality since outrage

Hong Kong, Nov. 8: A student at a Hong Kong university who fell one floor in a parking lot during pro-democracy protests at the weekend died on Friday, the first student death in months of demonstrations in the Chinese-ruled city and a likely trigger for fresh unrest.

Chow Tsz-lok, 22, an undergraduate at the University of Science and Technology, died of injuries he suffered, when he fell from the third to the second floor of a parking lot during a police dispersal operation.

Chow's death, on graduation day for many students, is expected to fuel anger at police, who are already under pressure amid accusations that they used force as the city grapples with its worst political crisis in decades. The university students trashed a campus branch of Starbucks, part of a franchise perceived to be pro-Beijing, and rallies are expected across the territory, when violence traditionally picks up.

"Condemn police brutality," they wrote on the restaurant's glass wall. Demonstrators had thronged the hospital this week to pay for Chow, leaving flowers and hundreds of get-well messages on walls. Students also staged rallies at universities across the former British colony.

"He was a nice person. He was a sports person. He liked playing football and basketball," friend and fellow student Ben, 25, said in tears. "We played netball together for a year. I hope he can rest in peace. I really miss him."

Students and young people have been at the forefront of the hundreds of thousands who have taken to the streets since June to press for greater democracy, among other demands, and rally against perceived Chinese meddling in the Asian financial hub.

The protests, ignited by a now-scrapped extradition bill allowing people to be sent to mainland China for trial, have evolved into wider calls for democracy. Chow had been pursuing a two-year undergraduate degree in computer science. His death came on graduation day for many students at his university.

In the latest incident, a man holding a bouquet approached pro-Beijing lawmaker Justice Ho as he campaigned in his constituency near the border with China.

The attack was "not only a serious criminal act but also pure election violence," Xu Leying, spokeswoman for the Hong Kong and Macao affairs office of China's central government, said.

Xu said radical protesters in Hong Kong "intend to create a 'chilling effect' by threatening and intimidating their candidates and their supporters," in order to affect the election results of the district councils and realise their purpose of seizing political power.

Xu also called for "strong punishment" against violence in Hong Kong and for a "fair, just, safe and orderly environment" for the district elections.

Protesters have thrown petrol bombs and vandalised banks, stores and metro stations, while police have fired rubber bullets, tear gas, water cannons and, in some cases, live ammunition in scenes of chaos.

Ailing Sharif may be treated in UK

SHAFAQAT ALI ISLAMABAD, NOV. 8

Pakistan government on Friday decided to remove former Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif's name from the Exit Control List (ECL) following his deteriorating health.

The interior ministry will write a letter to the federal cabinet and the erstwhile premier's name will be removed from the ECL, after approval. The interior ministry had received an application from the Sharif family seeking removal of Nawaz Sharif's name from the ECL.

The plan was submitted for Nawaz Sharif's treatment abroad. "The Sharif family had tasked Pakistan Muslim League (Nawaz) President Shehbaz Sharif to submit the application."

The doctors at the Sharif Medical City Hospital recommended shifting the erstwhile premier abroad for treatment as his platelets count has dropped below 30,000.

Nawaz Sharif is likely to leave for London next week along with Shehbaz Sharif and Maryam Nawaz for medical treatment.

On the other hand, PML-N vice president Maryam Nawaz said her father, Nawaz Sharif, must go anywhere around the world where his treatment is possible. Maryam Nawaz spoke to reporters outside an accountability court (AC) in Lahore and maintained that it is another debate whether Nawaz Sharif is willing for treatment abroad.

She said the PML-N supreme leader's health was still very critical as his platelets count is not getting stable despite medication.

"Nawaz Sharif's platelets dropped yesterday as well and doctors are not able to identify his disease," Maryam Nawaz said.

Nawaz Sharif on Wednesday had been discharged from Lahore's Services Hospital, where he was undergoing a medical treatment for 14 days due to fluctuation in his platelets count.

35 TRAPPED
IN GERMAN POTASH MINE

Berlin, Nov. 8: Around 35 mine staff were trapped about 700 meters below ground, two of them injured, after an unexpected blast in a potash mine in eastern Germany, a spokesman with the state mining authority was cited as saying.

The local broadcaster MDR reported that a rescue operation had begun.

The staff were located in a safe sector of the mine in Teichenthal, about 150 km southwest of Berlin, and were being supplied with oxygen.

The mining authority said one of the injured was in a serious condition, the other only lightly injured, and that there was a possibility that they could be brought to the surface through a shaft that was intact. The mine is no longer active but is being used to dispose mining waste from elsewhere.

IRAN DOWNS UNKNOWN FLYING OBJECT

Teheran, Nov. 8: The Iranian army shot down an unidentified drone near the port of Bandar-e Mahabadi on the Gulf coast on Friday, ISNA news agency reported.

The unmanned aircraft was downed over Iranian territory with a domestically manufactured Mersad surface-to-air missile, said Teheran.

The incident comes amid soaring tensions between Tehran and Washington since President Donald Trump unilaterally abandoned a landmark 2015 nuclear deal last year and reimposed crippling sanctions.

Trump in June authorized a military strike after Iran shot down a US drone, only to call off the retaliation at the last moment.

Washington insists the aircraft was in international airspace, but Iran says it was over territorial waters.

CHINA BRANDS HONG KONG PROTESTERS MOBSTERS

Beijing, Nov. 8: China has slammed radical protesters in Hong Kong as "mobsters" using violence to influence upcoming local elections, after a pro-Beijing lawmaker was injured in a scabbling.

With Beijing and Hong Kong's unpopular leader Carrie Lam refusing to offer a political solution to the protesters' grievances, violence has spiralled on both sides of the ideological divide.

In the latest incident, a man holding a bouquet approached pro-Beijing lawmaker Justice Ho as he campaigned in his constituency near the border with China.

The attack was "not only a serious criminal act but also pure election violence," Xu Leying, spokeswoman for the Hong Kong and Macao affairs office of China's central government, said.
