'EC members not clones of each other'

"The three members of the ECI are not expected to be templates or clones of each other. There have been so many times in the past when there has been a vast diversion of views, as it can and should be. But the same largely remained within the confines of the ECI," Arora said. The poll panel's laws suggest preference for a unanimous view, but provide for a majority ruling in the absence of unanimity.In a strongly-worded letter to Arora on May 4, Lavasa is learnt to have said he is being forced to stay away from the meetings of the full commission since minority decisions are not being recorded. He is also learnt to have said his participation in the meeting is 'meaningless' as dissent remained unrecorded. Lavasa said his notes on the need for transparency have not been responded to so he has decided to stay away from model coderelated complaints.

The EC's legal division had opined that dissent cannot be recorded on decisions as model code violations are not part of a quasi judicial hearing where all the three — the CEC and two fellow commissioners sign. The majority view is conveyed to the parties concerned. The dissent remains recorded in the file only and not made public. Lavasa had dissented in some of the 11 decisions the EC took on complaints against Prime Minister Narendra Modi and BJP chief Amit Shah for alleged model code violations. The two were given a clean chit in all the decisions.

Instagram has a new star: PIB While the Election Commission is already using mainstream media to spread awareness on elections, PIB resorted to using memes to strengthen its connect with the youth. This seems to be reaping dividends, as thanks to the intriguing memes, PIB now has the fastest growing Instagram handles among all government departments. "We are using this method for the first time and going forward we might use them for other issue-based campaigns too," Gaurav Khare, deputy director, social media, PIB, told FE, adding, "We make sure that even though the content is relatively light, constitutional correctness is maintained throughout." Among other things, election awareness memes by the PIB are playing on snippets from famous Bollywood scenes. These posts comprise popular and easily identifiable references with superstars imploring citizens to exercise their democratic right. Apart from Bollywood, PIB's eight-member social media team is also engaging with other contemporary cinematic trends such as Avengers and Game of Thrones. The move is more significant, with about 45 million new citizens enrolling to caste their vote in the 2019 Lok Sabha elections. Instagram is owned by Facebook and people between 18 and 24 years comprise the bulk of its users. In an age of deep internet penetration and dwindling attention spans, memes are proving to be a light and effective medium for communication. The term'meme'was first introduced by evolutionary biologist Richard Dawkins in his 1976 book, The Selfish Gene, to elucidate the intra-cultural propagation of ideas and idiosyncrasies. While Dawkins explained

meme as something that spreads like a virus, it is, indeed, interesting to see memes going viral on the internet.

EC revisits clean chit to NITI, PMO at Lavasa behest

It was alleged the PMO used NITI for gathering information on Gondia, Wardha and Latur ahead of Prime Minister Narendra Modi's election rallies there.

Speaking at a press conference on May 12, Deputy Election Commissioner Sandeep Saxena had informed journalists that the EC found no merit in the complaint as the PM, by virtue of an instruction issued on October 7, 2014, is permitted to combine his official and electioneering visits. The clean chit, The Sunday Express has learnt, was given despite Lavasa's request on file for further clarification from NITI Aayog CEO Amitabh Kant on the nature of the PM's visits and whether the government think tank had indeed sought information from the collectors of Gondia, Wardha and Latur. The complaint was dismissed as CEC Sunil Arora and EC Sushil Chandrafelt the exemption granted to the PM on October 7, 2014, rendered the allegation infructuous. Lavasa is learnt to have subsequently questioned how the matter was decided without obtaining complete facts. Following his objection to the process followed, the EC wrote a second letter to Kant on Thursday asking him to clarify the nature of the PM's visit and whether the NITI Aayog had sought information from the collectors ahead of his visit. Kant hasn't been given any deadline to respond by. The Congress had filed its complaint with the EC on May 1. In it, the party had claimed that the NITI Aayog was used by the PMO to collect information in advance about places where Modi was scheduled to campaign. Quoting from a news report in scroll.in, the Congress complaint alleged that in March, the NITI Aayog wrote to collectors in Maharashtra seeking basic statistics and demographics of Gondia, Latur and Wardha. Similar information was sought from officers of all Union territories on local culture, history, heroes and the areas Modi was to visit. This, the Congress said, was a violation of the of EC's instructions prohibiting misuse of government resources in campaigning. Following the complaint, the EC had sought

Kant's comments, who denied any wrongdoing and is also said to have justified the data collection as a routine exercise since the think tank often profiles different districts. Once his response was received, Lavasa is learnt to have been in favour of seeking further clarification while his colleagues were of the opinion that there was no MCC violation. But when Lavasa objected to the complaint's disposal without obtaining full facts, the EC wrote a second letter to Kant this week.

While this wasn't the first case where Lavasa was overruled by his colleagues, this definitely is the first instance when the incumbent Commission decided to revisit a matter already disposed of. The Indian Express had first reported on May 5 that Lavasa had differed with the majority view in five different MCC complaints against the PM and BJP president Amit Shah, of which four pertained to Modi.
